Intergenerational Cycles of Trauma and Violence: An Attachment and Family Systems Perspective Pamela C. Alexander, 2014-12-15 Exploring the conditions under which children as a function of their own abuse become abusive themselves That experiences from childhood affect our behavior in adulthood especially in the ways we treat our children and intimate partners is generally accepted Indeed theories of intergenerational transmission of violence indicate that if we ourselves have been abused and neglected as children we will likely be abusive and neglectful to others close to us thus extending the cycle across generations However many individuals who were maltreated as children do not replicate this cycle and such models make little sense of the individual raised in a good family who is violent either as a child or as an adult These discontinuities of cycles of violence and trauma have challenged professionals and nonprofessionals alike However broadening our vision and attending to new areas of research can help to illuminate this conundrum and open up new avenues of intervention In this book Pamela Alexander does just that She proposes that an increased risk for abusive behavior or revictimization as a function of one's own experiences of abuse or trauma in childhood can best be understood through the complementary lenses of attachment theory focusing on the relationship between the child and the caregiver and family systems theory focusing on the larger context of this relationship That is what a child acquires from her relationship with a caregiver is not simply a reflection of what she has learned from experiencing or witnessing abuse Rather it emerges from the child's felt experience of the relationship itself on implicit emotional physical and neurobiological levels Alexander founds the book on this multifaceted parent child attachment relationship and its place in the wider family system integrating clinical experience with close attention to the long term neurobiological and epigenetic effects of trauma She focuses on common outcomes of a history of maltreatment and of child sexual abuse in particular including peer victimization partner violence parenting problems and sexual offending A detailed review of the literature accompanies instructive case examples Sources of trauma from outside the family including combat exposure political terrorism foster care and incarceration of parents are considered Finally Alexander analyzes the multiple sources of natural resilience the neurobiological the individual the relational and the social to enable professionals of all backgrounds to tailor make effective interventions for interrupting cycles of trauma and violence
